WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22

The agitated official in the Custom House at Owensboro simply wants to retain his position, with the Franking privilege.

Would the Hartford Republican care to answer a civil, every-day sort of a question? Who is it in favor of the Surveyor of the Port of Louisville, and why has it kept silent so long about this very important matter?

It is said that the friends of Messrs. David B. Hill, of New York, and Carter Harrison, of Illinois, are quietly working up a boom for them as the next Democratic nominees for President and Vice President. "Hill and Harrison" would sound all right, all right.

GORMAN, of Maryland, and McCree, of Kentucky, are meeting with an enthusiastic welcome from the Democrats of the country upon their return to public life. They are both men of distinguished ability, and it is to be regretted that they cannot go right into harness.

Recent religious statistics covering the United States show that the Roman Catholic Church leads all other denominations in point of number of communicants. The Methodist, Baptist, Disciples of Christ, Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches follow in their respective order.

WILL MATTHEWS, who is sentenced to be hung at Oxford Miss., doesn't want to ride in the Jim Crow car to go to glory. He has petitioned the court to change the time and place of his hanging so that he will not have to swing into eternity along with a darkey, as provided. He says he is opposed to social equality, both here and hereafter.

A FRIEND tries to addle TIE HERALD by calling us down on our egg joke of last week, wherein we said we never heard of eggs with corners on 'em. He says that not long ago one of his hens laid an egg with a large wart on the side of it. Egg-sactly! But in all our experience with hen-fruit we could never take a wart-shaped protuberance as constituting a corner, either in appearance or by parabole.

UNCLE SAM'S representative at Corea is asking Congress for a $40,000 house to live in, reeking a peculiar complaint. Minister Allen says the ceiling of his present quarters are only six feet six inches from the floor, while he is six feet two inches tall. He wants the building altered so that if the occasion or the provocation requires it, he can jamb his silk turban on his head and sail out at any hour of the day or night.

ADJ. GEN. DAVID R. MURRAY, of Cloverport, has announced his candidacy for Circuit Judge in the Breckinridge-Grayson district, now represented on the bench by Judge T. R. McBeath, of Leitchfield. Col. Murray is a lawyer of splendid ability and one of the foremost Democrats of Kentucky. He is well known in this section, and has many friends here who wish him success. Judge McBeath announced a few days ago that he was a candidate for re-election.

REALLY, nowadays we, are seldom greatly surprised at anything extraordinary that we see or hear about. The fact that the President of the United States executed a cake-walk, ex-Speaker Reed had been caught smoking a cigarette. But nobody seemed much surprised at either demonstration. We are such a progressive and strenuous people, don't you know, that it takes a whole lot to lift our eyebrows above the every-day, stolid stare.

PRINCE HENRY, of Prussia, brother of Emperor William, of Germany, will make the United States an early visit, accompanied by his royal retinue. The party is even now on the way, in the imperial yacht, Hohenzollern. Upon arrival, the vessel will proceed at once to New York harbor, where a big naval demonstration will greet the distinguished visitors. Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans will have charge of the welcoming squadron. The royal prince is coming in great pomp and splendor and it is well that he be given a reception befitting the occasion.

MADAME SCHUMANN-HEINK, the famous contralto, is thirty-five years of age and the mother of eight robust children, the greater number of whom were born closely together and during her most successful period of professional singing. They are as follows: August, Heinrich, sixteen; Hans, fifteen; Walter, fourteen; Ferdinand, eight; Maria, five, and George, three. This information is submitted to that large and growing class of American married ladies who think and aver that they "haven't time to be bothered with children."

The latest kinescope view of the Louisville Furverysorship contest reveals Col. C. M. Barnett slightly in the lead over his opponent, Col. D. R. Collier. Col. Barnett and his friends are using the State machine for all it is worth. It is urged that Col. Barnett, in his capacity as Chairman of the State Central Committee, will have a big say in the election of delegates to the National Convention, and inasmuch as there are no charges against his official career, his retention would be advisable. All of which, of course, is of much interest to Mr. Roosevelt. As it takes a Republican to fill the bill, THE HERALD hopes Col. Barnett will be retained. In a case like this, we feel that we are not violating our political faith by being for our home man.

Whether the United States "is" or whether the United States "are" is a matter which has been bothering the official authorities at Washington as well as some of the grammarians of the country for quite awhile. It is a time-worn proposition as to whether a singular or plural verb goes with the United States. The Constitution and nearly all the laws, documents and messages in the early days of our republic used the plural verb, but the tendency has been steadily towards the singular form, which was adopted in the writings of Webster, Jefferson, Evans, Blaine, and the earlier messages of President Jackson. In later years, Lincoln, Grant, Cleveland, Harrison and McKinley used it exclusively, which mode has been the expression of the Supreme Court. It is quite the general opinion that legally, at least, the United States "is."

Just as a matter of national interest and not that anybody seems to be able to help the situation, it might be well enough to remember that we still have the Philippines on hand. The news from that quarter is by any means, so far as the ultimate peace of the province is concerned. At no place on the islands is the authority of the United States Government gratuitously and unanimously acknowledged. True, there is a faint show of this feeling where our soldiers are quartered in respectable numbers, but that is all. The Filipinos have never been tamed, so to speak, and the indications are no stronger in that direction now than at the beginning of our war of conquest. There is an innate spirit of rebellion caused by smothered freedom, which will never be suppressed until the people of the islands are given that independence which every human heart feels is rightly his.

Star-Eyed Goddess's Chance.

The election of the Hon. James B. McCreary as a Senator in Congress from Kentucky, should remind Colonel Henry Watterson of his duty and his pleasure. The Senatorship is out of the way. The Governorship is Colonel Watterson's meat, and he should seize it with a firm hand. After the Governorship comes the Democratic nomination for President. It can't go to a better man than the Colonel. Think of the chance to swing the election of money power. Over the lineaments of that sleeping beauty, the Star-eyed Goddess spreads a divine flash, full and not hot. She raises those fair eyelids, closed too long. Stars, moons and suns, a whole heaven of lights flash from those incomparable orbs. She starts, she stirs, she jumps up and dares a break-down. All the fires of his tariff-smashing days burn in the Colonel's heart. He draws a long breath and a Damascus pen. The tabernacles of robbery had better get insured. The Star-eyed is on her palfray. The Colonel is on a wild mustang. Hooryay for the new crusade!

Novel Run on a Store.

ATHENS, O., January 18.—Because of rumors that W. P. Hoisington, an Andersonville merchant was insolvent, a run on his general store began this morning, and continued until his entire stock, general merchandise, was depleted. Hoisington and numerous creditors, who planned a systematic run, and who, entering his store, began to help themselves to his stock of general merchandise, placing it in vehicles and hauling it away.

Hoisington's large stock of boots and shoes, groceries, dry goods, clothing and hardware was carted away in loads, and when the raid was over he was wholly without goods with which to transact business. Many of the most influential citizens of Amesville were engaged in the run.

Hoisington was in Athens at the time, and was notified of the affair by telephone. He did not reach Amesville until after the goods were gone, and he now threatens to bring suit to recover them. The store was in charge of his clerk, Miss Jennie James, and finding that she could do nothing to stop the rush, she sat down and allowed the alleged creditors to help themselves.

Iliteracy and Crime.
(Lexington Herald.)
The Chaplain of the Kentucky State penitentiary, Rev. Lew G. Wallace, states in a letter dated December 30, 1901, that after careful investigation he finds 67 per cent of the total prison population of 1,300 persons, to be totally illiterate, and fully one-half of the remaining 32 per cent to be semi-illiterate. Iliteracy cannot be considered as an effect of crime; can it be considered as a producing factor?

Sad Fate of a Miser.
LANSING, IOWA, Jan. 18.—Beside an iron-bound box, which contained nearly $10,000 in money, bonds and other valuable documents, with a will which showed that she still had other thousands hidden about her house, the body of Mrs. Pike-Dickey, an aged recluse, was found this afternoon with her nose, ears, lips and fingers gnawed almost off by rats. She had evidently been dead for nearly a week, and heart disease overtook her while she was counting her money, is supposed to have caused her death.

Her will left her belongings to various church organizations, but the money box failed to contain all the gold her testament bequeathed. Mrs. Pike came here 46 years ago. After her husband died, she married a veteran named Dickey, who in two weeks left her. Since then his wife has lived alone in a house remote from neighbors.

Fell Fifty Feet.

Lincoln Smith, who lives near Fordsville, La., fell from the Texas tower just east of Fordsville a few nights ago, and although the distance he fell was fifty feet, he came out unhurt barring a few severe bruises and a fracture of one leg. He had gone to Fordville and had stayed longer than he should and when he started home he concluded to save some of the distance by walking across the high trestle. It was quite dark and when he reached the middle he was not walking straight and stumbled on one of the rails. The result was that he fell headlong, alighting in the bottom of a branch that is filled with rocks of all sizes. He had some difficulty in getting himself together so as to get away, but when he was examined by a physician it was found that all the injury he had received was a fractured leg or two. If he had not been seen to fall, it did so and survived.

Wearing Out the Nerves.

Many people wear themselves out needlessly. Their consciences are a tyrant. An exaggerated sense of duty leads many a person to anxious, ceaseless activity, to be constantly doing something, ever punctual, never idle a second of time, scorn to rest, such are in unconscious nerve tension. They say they have no time to rest they have so much to do, not thinking that they are rapidly unstraining themselves for probably what would have been their best and greatest work in after years. Self control of nerve force is the great lesson of health, and therefore of life itself. To understand how to relax, is to understand how to strengthen nerves. Hearty laughter is a source of relaxation, as are all high thoughts, trust, and love. Relaxation is found in diversion.
